Safety Measures

In Fukushima Prefecture, strict safety measures are in place throughout all stages of production, from cultivation through to processing and distribution, to detect even the slightest amount of radiation and ensure product safety. Also, in addition to the monitoring inspections implemented by the prefectural government, additional inspections of every single bag of rice are implemented at the farms to ensure absolute food safety. There has been a huge reduction in the amount of radioactivity detected as a result of the strategies for decontaminating the soil and preventing radioactive elements from being absorbed into the ground, so much so that no rice was found to have radioactive level higher than the standard natural level in 2015.
